Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

I am a tax payer that doesn't use my phone very much. I cancelled my home phone because I got sick and tired of having to pay for someone else's phone use. I use a pre-paid cell phone only.

It should only be the people that use Long Distance and regular phones that should have to pay for other person's land phones. The people that abuse the system, the so-called poor, can actually get their own pre-paid cell phones, and it doesn't cost that much. It actually works out that it is cheaper than a land line.

The more we keep paying for, the more that they expect to be paid for. We need to teach them to be more self-sufficient, and maybe if the government said NO more often, the rest of us might be able to afford the things that we can't afford anymore on a fixed income.

Sincerely,

Susan Davis
